

California Organic Produce Farms

Below is a partial list of organic farms that serve institutional buyers in California, including school districts. While we include several California organic farms, you can find additional organic and/or regenerative producers in these directories: Community Alliance with Family Farmers Farm Directory, CCOF Member Directory, Chef Ann Foundation CA Beef Procurement, Farmer's Pal Listing, Local Harvest Listing, and CDFA Marketplace. For a practical “how to” guide for increasing organic sourcing, please see Friends of the Earth’s Organic School Food Roadmap.

USDA Certified Organic foods are grown without the use of hazardous synthetic pesticides, synthetic fertilizers or genetically modified organisms (GMOs). Organic farmers generally use natural, soil-enhancing fertility and pest management methods like composting, cover cropping, managed grazing and diverse crop rotations. Organic animal products are produced without antibiotics, growth-promoting drugs or hormones, and come from animals raised on certified organic pasture or fed only certified organic grains and grasses. You can learn more here about the benefits of serving organic food in schools.
